REPORT OF SCHOOL BOARD

OF CHICHESTER, FOR YEAR ENDING MARCH 1, 1887.

As we come to the close of another school year it devolves upon us to render an account of our stewardship. Under the operation of our new law, the labors and responsibilities of your school officers have been largely increased, and these cares have been still further augmented by the change from two terms in each school, to the three which have been enjoyed by reason of the wisely liberal appropriation of last year. If any are tempted to reduce educational expenditures on the score of economy, let them remember that "there is that scattereth, and yet increaseth; and there is that withholdeth more than is meet, but it tendeth to poverty." Physical poverty is bad enough, mental poverty is far worse, and moral poverty is the worst of all. Against these three forms of poverty our schools are, or may be, our principal defence. Let us spare neither time, money nor diligence to bring them up to the highest possible standard.

New ideas are constantly being broached, and many experiments made. Those methods which prove practical and more effective become in time universal. The free common school system of America has not yet reached perfection, either in theory or in practice.

Even its most fundamental purposes have not yet been entirely realized. For instance, it was the purpose of the founders of this system that every child should have equal advantages under it. Theoretically they do, in fact they do not. Our forefathers thought that, when they had provided that school houses and teachers should be furnished at the public expense, then certainly every child would have equal opportunities.

Years of experience have proved that something more is needed. Every scholar in school has two principal sources of information,—the teacher and the text-book. From which of these does he learn the most? Surely both are indispensable. Then why should one be furnished with perfect regularity, while the other is left at hap-hazard? The same rule should apply to both, hence both must be provided at the public expense before it will be true “that every scholar has an equal opportunity.”

The law of New Hampshire authorizes any town or city to expend money for the purchase of all necessary text books for the scholars in its schools. This is only permissive, but as was the case in regard to town management of schools, if our citizens are not shrewd enough to see its advantages and adopt its provisions, it will probably not be long before a general law will render this matter compulsory, as it is already in several of the neighboring states. This subject is coming up for discussion at our next school meeting. Let us settle it, and settle it right. Other important propositions will come before said meeting, and we hope that all our citizens (this includes the ladies) will manifest their interest by their presence.

After due deliberation it is thought best to omit the special reports of each school, as far as relates to success of teachers, etc.

We believe that all our teachers have done faithful work in the school room. It has also come to our knowledge that some of them have devoted much extra time to their scholars, thus showing indisputably their interest in, and fitness for, the work of teaching.

To attempt to pick flaws in the methods of our teachers by contrasting one with another, might serve a good purpose when glaring faults were to be noted. But in the absence of such faults it would be a mere waste of words.

Of our scholars, we can say in general, there has been a commendable show of ambition, and in many cases noteworthy efforts to excel. Some schools have suffered seriously from the inroads of sickness. In two instances teachers have been compelled, by illness, to leave their schools. Another was called home by serious illness of near relatives, and the remaining two weeks of the term were filled out by another teacher.

An inspection of the various Registers shows that in the aggregate a vast amount of time is lost by reason of absences, amounting in some cases to nearly one-half the term. Parents cannot be too careful about this matter, and trivial difficulties ought never to be deemed a sufficient reason for irregular attendance. The whole number of scholars registered this year has been one hundred and seventy-one, (171) of which number all but three have been in our own schools during one or more terms.

The number of children between the ages of five and fifteen is reported by the Selectmen as follows: Boys, forty-nine; girls, fifty-two.

None are reported of school age who have not been in school, nor any between the ages of fourteen and twenty-one who cannot read and write.

We gladly note the fact that the desire for a better education is yearly becoming more manifest. This demand must be rightly met or its first result will be an injury. The tendency now in our country towns is to intrude the so-called higher branches into our primary or common schools to the detriment of all who especially need a thorough elementary training. In such a school the increased attention given to the higher branches must be directly at the expense of the lower. It is robbing the foundation to build the edifice higher; in short it is a rank folly. Every town should have within its borders a "higher school," as centrally located as possible, where its more advanced pupils may have the individual attention of a suitable instructor.

It is hoped that these suggestions, briefly but candidly offered, may commend themselves to the good sense and public spirit of our towns-people, so that ere long progressive action may be taken in this direction, or in any other which may be of equal or greater importance.

On the "roll of honor" are recorded three names as not having been tardy or absent during the whole year: Cora S. Brown, Edna M. Brown, Gertie M. Brown.

The following are reported as not having been absent or tardy for two terms: Eddie C. Batchelder, Josie P. French, Courtland Ordway, Elzora I. Ordway, Rosa J. Ordway, Charlie A. Towle, Minnie A. Towle, Katie N. Towle, Christie S. West.

Twenty-four others are on record for one term, and although their names do not appear here, we trust they will try harder another year and so secure honorable mention.

Subjoined will be found the Treasurer's report and table of statistics.

All of which is respectfully submitted,

S. A. KENDALL,	} School Board of Chichester.
